How does the borough sales tax cap work?

Two examples of how a purchase would be impacted if voters approve the proposition

Example 1. $300 shopping trip

Current borough code: $$300 \times 3$ percent borough tax = $9

If proposition is approved: $$300 \times 3$ percent borough tax = $9

This proposition would not change sales tax on purchases under $500

Example 2. $25,000 vehicle

Current borough code: $$500 \times 3$ percent borough tax = $15

If proposition approved: $$1,000 \times 3$ percent borough tax = $30

This proposition would increase taxable transaction cap to $1,000

Estimated change in sales tax revenues for borough and cities

Gain from raising sales tax cap, loss from exempting residential rent, and net impact to revenue

Oct. 4 ballot proposition
to raise maximum amount subject to borough sales tax

Proposition would raise taxable limit

- Under existing code, the borough sales tax is charged on the first $500 of each transaction
- The proposition approved by the borough assembly for Oct. 4 ballot, if approved by voters, would raise taxable transaction limit to $1,000 on Jan. 1, 2017
- If proposition passes, borough code would be amended to exempt residential rents from sales tax Jan. 1, 2017
- By Fiscal 2018, net borough gain from higher taxable limit and rent exemption estimated at $2.9 million/year

Taxable limit unchanged since 1965

- The $500 limit has not been changed since borough voters adopted the first sales tax ordinance in 1965
- If adjusted for inflation, $500 in 1965 would have the same buying power as more than $3,000 today
- Many Alaska municipalities have a sales tax limit
- Many caps are at $1,000 or higher; some are lower
- As home-rule cities, Seward and Kenai determine their own sales tax cap; other cities ruled by borough cap

Quick facts

- Of the 4,162 senior-owned properties in the borough that received a borough property tax exemption in 2015, more than 3,600 were valued at under $350,000 and paid no borough or service area property taxes. The exemption is $150,000 for city property taxes.
- The number of senior properties that receive a tax exemption has increased 43% since 2009.
- The total value of tax-exempt senior property has increased almost 75% since 2009.
- In 2015, $815 million in senior-owned property was tax exempt in the borough. That represents just under 12% of all residential and commercial property in the borough (excluding oil and gas property).
- The state projects the borough's senior population will grow from 8,600 in 2015 to almost 15,000 by 2030, numbering almost one-quarter of the borough's entire population in 2030.
- The state stopped fully reimbursing the borough for all $150,000 of the senior tax exemption in 1986, and stopped any reimbursement in 1997. The second $150,000 of the tax exemption is optional for municipalities — and has never been reimbursed by the state.
- The ordinance would not change the $50,000 exemption provided seniors and all other residential property owners in the borough.

OCT. 4 BALLOT PROPOSITION

Senior Property Tax Exemption Changes

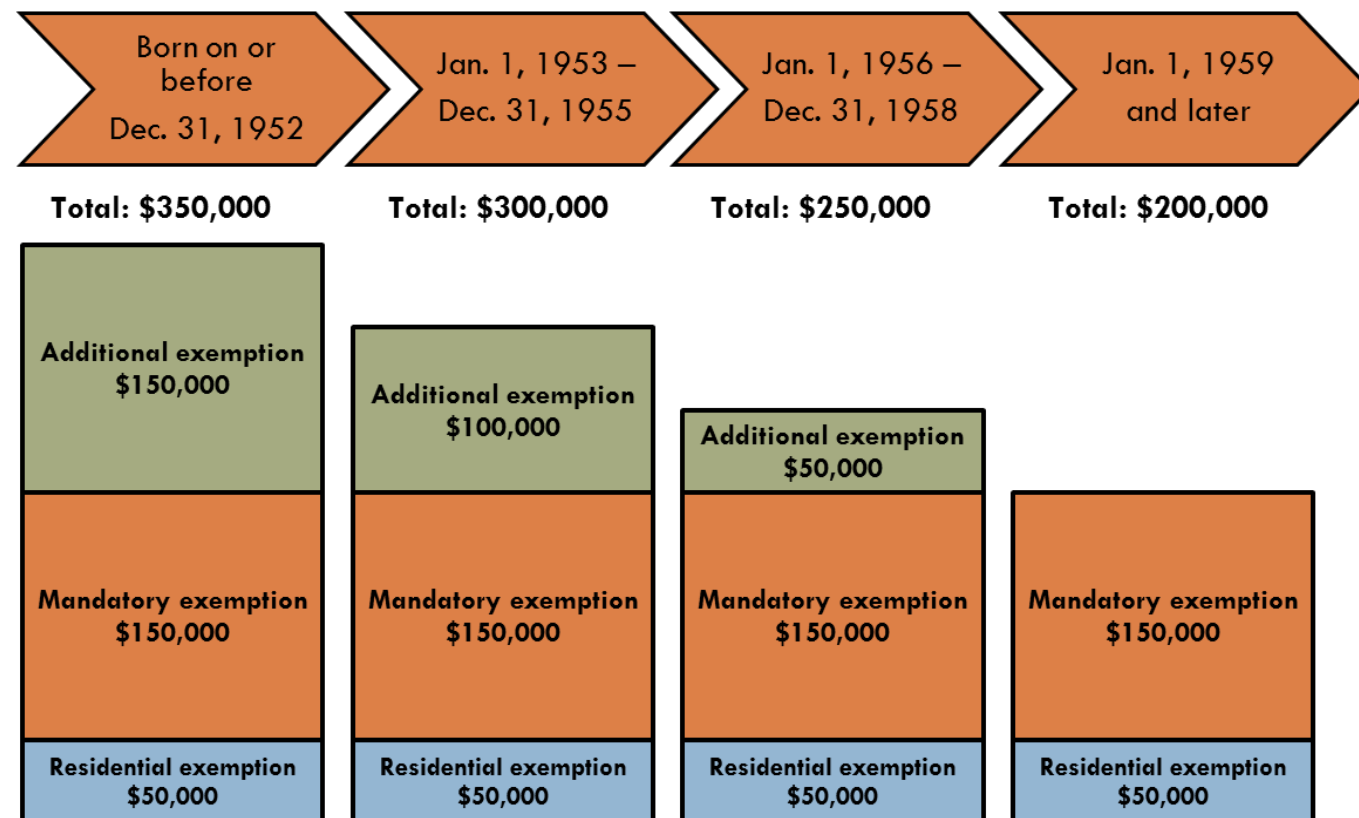

INFORMATIONAL BROCHURE

- 1 The changes in this ballot proposition would not eliminate the borough's senior property tax exemption.
- 2 Whatever exemptions seniors currently receive for their primary residence would remain as long as they are eligible.
- 3 The Kenai Borough property tax exemption for senior citizens currently matches the largest in the state, and under this proposition would move to fourth-largest in the state for newly eligible applicants starting in 2024.
- 4 Under this proposition, residents who turn 65 years old after Dec. 31, 2023, owning a home assessed at less than $200,000 would pay no borough or service area property taxes.
- 5 This proposition would not change the borough hardship provision that limits a qualifying senior's property tax bill to 2% of gross annual household income.

Proposed phase-in of changes

No change for currently exempt seniors or people who turn 65 before 2018

Senior citizens total property tax exemption by owner's birthday

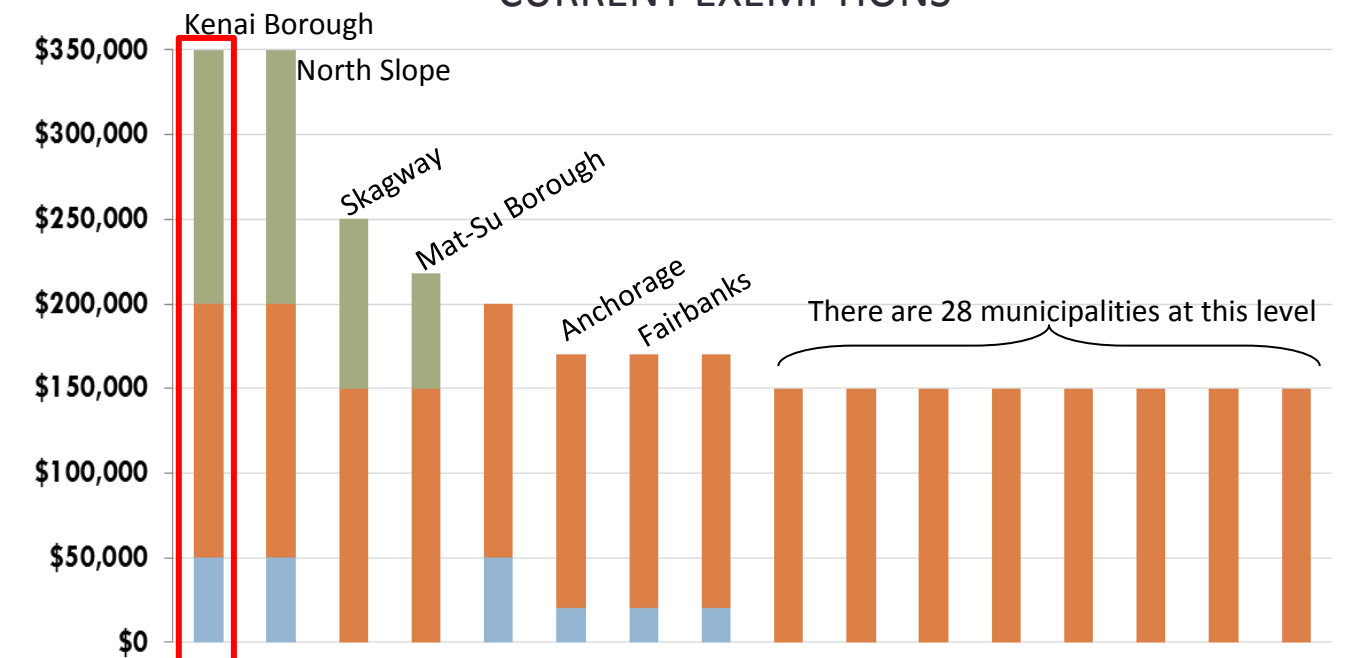

How does this apply to me?

- What is your birthdate? Check above to see what your exemption would be, based on your birthdate. If you were born on or before Dec. 31, 1952, this proposition would not affect your borough property tax exemption.
- What if I don't turn 65 until 2025? Under this proposition, you would be exempt from borough taxes on up to $200,000 in property value.
- Do you qualify for a hardship exemption? If your borough tax bill is greater than 2% of your household annual gross income, you may qualify for a hardship exemption. This would not change the hardship exemption.

Comparison of Kenai Borough with other municipalities

The Kenai Borough currently leads the state — along with the North Slope Borough — in senior property tax exemptions. If the ballot proposition is approved, the Kenai Borough would move to fourth place in senior exemptions among Alaska municipalities.

CURRENT EXEMPTIONS

IF PROPOSITION IS APPROVED, EXEMPTIONS IN 2024

■ Optional senior tax exemption
■ State-mandated senior tax exemption
■ Exemption given to all residential property *
